Making a Difference One Paw at a Time

It takes a special person, dog, and commitment to qualify as a therapy dog team. Dog owners who volunteer for this type of service are generous and compassionate people who enjoy sharing their special dogs with others, and have the time to visit regularly. Therapy dogs are well trained and temperamentally suited to encourage, comfort, relieve and help heal our vulnerable patients.

Few things are more rewarding than therapy dog work. Not only can we personally brighten the days of those who need companionship, but get to witness first-hand the incredible impact a gentle, joyful dog can have on the lives of others.

Our therapy dogs must:

1. Pass the Canine Good Citizens test (CGC) to prove he/she is a good citizen and can be in public with friendly strangers.
2. Pass the therapy Certification Test to prove he/she can handle distractions like wheelchairs, crutches, machines, food on floor, and many other things that might be encountered during a visit
